developing leaders

Ministry growth and leadership development go hand in hand. Without a strong, growing leadership team, a senior pastor will find it difficult to meet the ministry needs of his congregation. We know God gifts certain people within a church with the potential to become leaders, but how do you identify those leaders? How do you help them develop their gifts to provide effective, creative leadership?

On February 11, hear from two senior pastors, a church consultant, and a researcher, all of them involved in leadership development for decades. They'll share important principles and practical ideas that will help you identify and enhance the skills of the leaders involved in your ministry.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND THIS SEMINAR:

- Senior Pastors
- Associate Pastors
- Elders
- Lay leaders
- Anyone in a position of leadership in the church!

George Barna is president of the Barna Research Group, Ltd., a marketing research firm. Among his 31 published books are the bestsellers The Second Coming of the Church and The Power of Vision. He has discussed leadership development and sound church statistics on many CCN seminars. Bishop Harry R. Jackson, Jr. is senior pastor of Hope Christian Church, College Park, MD, which serves over 22 nationalities and/or cultural groups from multiple locations throughout metropolitan Washington DC. His teaching ministry, "The Hope Connection", is broadcast on television and radio in the United States and abroad. Randy Pope is senior pastor of Perimeter Church, Duluth, Georgia, which has planted 19 churches in the Atlanta area and helped launch six worldwide centers to facilitate church planting. Randy has led seminars for church leaders in Asia and Africa and has lectured at seminars in the U.S. His first book, The Prevailing Church, was published in 2002. Brad Smith is interim executive director of the International Center for Theological Urban Studies (ICTHUS), which helps seminaries and leadership centers develop leaders in four continents. Brad was formerly president and chief executive officer of Leadership Network.
